The Miller Flight.

Strong exception has been taken to the publication of the rumor that C. K. Miller had the handling of a corruption fund in the Soi Yung shooting case. It was only given for what it was worth as part of the current gossip about Miller's flight, and then under the impression that it referred entirely to the past stages of the case in question. No evidence of the existence of a corruption fund has come to light. It is said, by a person who claims to know the inner facts of Miller's departure, that he was cornered for a comparatively small amount, but too large for him to pay, that other complications hinged on this, and he could not face the music.

LEGISLATIVE SUMMARY.

Yesterday was the hundred and nineteenth day. Its business opened with the introduction of a resolution by Mr. Hayselden, to give himself leave to introduce his tax law amendment. Mr. Thurston opposed its reception on a point of order, and the President ruled that it required a two-thirds vote. The same member then moved the indefinite postponement of the resolution, saying that the proposed increase of thirty-three and a third per cent in the rate of taxation was unjustifiable. The real taxation of the country, he held, was shown in the expenditures, which were at the rate of two and a half millions per annum, and the country could not stand any more. The plantations could not survive heavier taxation. He did not believe ten of them made any profit last year. Mr. Aholo said that side of the story about the plantations that were paying large dividends had not been told. Under the new law by which all children were free to attend English schools, more money would be required to be raised by taxation. As if conceiving that his one-eyed argument settled the matter, he moved the previous question, which carried. The resolution passed by 22 to 8. Messrs. Kauli and Nahale being the only Tories voting with the Opposition. Mr. Dole formally asked the Minister of the Interior to state to what judicial circuit, and electoral and taxation district, does Ocean or Papapa Island belong. Mr. Gibson recommended him to bring in a bill to settle the questions, as the island was a new acquisition.

The House took up the afternoon in considering on third reading the bill to appoint the two additional judges to the Supreme Court. Mr. Kaulikou engineered the bill through, and it passed to be read a third time to-day. In the course of the discussion Mr. Dole again pointed out that the difficulties, forming the alleged pretext for the bill, were not met in it. To avoid having judges review cases tried by themselves, he suggested that competent District Judges be given jurisdiction in the different Circuits similar to that held now by the Supreme Court judges, while the bench as now constituted at the capital be made a final court of appeal, admiralty, etc.

WHAT THEY ARE SAYING.

Noble S-m P-r-k-r-I'm saving my maiden speech for next session. It is a daisy.

J-s-e-A-a-I am some deaf but I can always see how Aholo votes. There is no danger of my making a mistake.

J. A. K-k-u-Like the Irishman's owl, "I don't talk much, but I kape up a divil of a thinking."

A. K-h-Me too.

Dr. W-g-t-It worries me dreadfully the way things are going. I wish I had twenty votes.

G. E. R-h-d-n-I won't get off the fence for anything less than the Attorney Generalship.

E. K. L-l-k-l-n-Yes, sir.

C. H. D-k-y-This desk makes a first-class foot stool. I am good for three months more.

L. A-h-l-What I don't know about parliamentary law isn't worth knowing.

Asa K-l-a-If that Pali road isn't built soon, I'm going to ask for a leave of absence.

J. L. K-l-k-u-If that secretary don't cease losing my pet bills I'll scalp him.

S. B. D-l-You can't make me mad. It is of no use to try. The reason why I don't come on time is that I'm too tired nights to wind my watch.

J. T. B-k-r-My time is very valuable, but I can sit here all the fall and draw pictures if I do not have to quote Scripture too often.

A Plague of Dogs.

Dropping into Mr. Jaeger's office yesterday to give the proprietor an item of news about forestry in the United States—for newspaper men are sometimes so overcharged with information that they cannot wait for the press to disseminate it—the HERALD reporter was sternly accosted by Mr. Buchanan, the "Mutual" acquaintance of a great many people. Said he:

"You ought to go for the dogs. Yesterday two savage dogs jumped on my little boy and bit him so badly that I had to put him under Dr. Trousseau's treatment. One caught him by the trousers and the other bit him on the neck."

"Well, I know what I should do if a dog bit anybody belonging to me," remarked a Government official, the nature of whose duties assists nature in making him a determined man. "I should kill the dog and, while my blood was up, should be apt to kill its owner too."

"But the owner in this case is a woman."

As the official is gallant to the acme, his rejoinder to this statement is withheld, as literally it was severe on the fair sex although doubtless only intended to apply to the small minority thereof owning vicious dogs.

In the conversation that succeeded it was agreed on as a fact that the police had long ago indefinitely postponed the enforcement of the dog license regulations. To the many facts adduced in support of this conclusion, the reporter related having counted a pack of nine dogs on the corner of King and Liliha streets at sunrise the day before, not one of which, he believed, wore a tag to indicate that it was of any benefit to the revenues of the country.

The Monthlies.

The Friend for October opens with an article on "Evolution," favoring the doctrine of "theistic evolution." Another article is an appreciative account of Hon. H. A. P. Carter's visit. "Notes by the Way" heads some description of Rev. J. A. Cruzan's vacation on Maui. Mr. Fuller, who was in the same party, giving in the Y. M. C. A. department similar experiences. Both apparently were filled with wonder and admiration of the natural scenery of that island. Rev. James M. Alexander contributes a poem on "Hawaiian Morning Glories," and Mr. F. L. Clarke "A Midsummer Episode," concluding with the sentiment "that God has made beautiful and attractive these islands of the sea to compensate us, in a large measure, for our isolation from our continental homes." We always thought the islands were made for the kanakas, and only the sugar cane for the haoles. Rev. Arthur D. Bissell has No. 2 of "Education in India"; Mr. F. W. Damon, "Notes of Mission Work among the Chinese on Hawaii and Maui," telling of his tour with Mr. Damon and Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Lechler on those islands, and the Rev. E. P. Baker writes of "The Surviving Missionaries Living on the Island of Hawaii." The latter are: Father Lyons, of Wainane, who arrived in 1832; Mother Hitchcock, of Papaikou, who arrived also in 1832; the present Mrs. Lyons, who arrived in 1835; Father Bond, of Kohala, and Father Paris, of Kona, who arrived in 1841; Dr. Wetmore, of Hilo, who arrived in 1849, and Mrs. Reed, of Waialeale, formerly Mrs. Shipman, who arrived in 1854. These seven are all the missionaries still living on the Island of Hawaii. The paper on "The Japanese," by Rev. S. E. Bishop, recently read at the Lyceum, is printed in full. All the departments, with the exception of the educational, which is crowded out, are up to the Friend's established standard of excellence.

The Anglican Church Chronicle for October leads off with an article on "Religious Education," attributing much of the lawlessness of these days to the neglect of religious education. The pith of the article is in the following sentence, "We would have every teacher imbued with the spirit of the Sermon on the Mount, and that he should make it the most important part of his daily work to instill the precepts thereof in his pupils, not of compulsion, but by reason of conscience." An article on, "What are we Going to Do with Our Boys?" speaks of growing difficulties in the way of those who would live by their wits in these Islands. It favors the appropriation for educating Hawaiian youths abroad, but suggests that the selection of beneficiaries should be by competitive examination, "so that no suspicion could be entertained of favoritism by any person or persons whatsoever, and that the son of the poorest native in the poorest district might have his chance to reach, by personal merit, the highest place in the nation open to him who has reached the size and configuration of a man. The healthful stimulus has been lost. It can never be created by holding up the glittering prizes of official salaries." Four pages and a half are occupied with the continuation of "Our Pilgrimage," by a traveler from Hawaii through the United States to England, containing many interesting episodes. A full department of "Church News" and a page or two of selections complete the number. It is evident that what the editors' hands have found to do they are doing with their might.

Fine Art.

For several days past a rare work of art, imported by an honorable citizen, has been on exhibition at King Bros' art store. A copy of Murillo's picture, "Ninos de la Concha," made from the original in Madrid, its artistic beauty grows upon you as you gaze. The representation is of the child Jesus giving a drink of water in a rustic cup to the boy, his precursor, John the Baptist. Above, floating in soft clouds, a band of youthful appearing angels is hovering, while on the ground an innocent lamb reposes. Royal purple girdles the young Messiah and a raiment of camel's hair his yet juvenile forerunner. The delicate and vividly natural tints, the lights and shades, are exquisitely laid on and blended, while the expression of face in the central figure is divinely engaging.

Try Martinielli Cider. It is absolutely pure. Macfarlane & Co., agents.

"As a true tonic, effective invigorator and genuine appetizer, Duffy's Malt Whisky is unexcelled."
